

What do you see?

Location: Ethiopia

In Ethiopia marginal lands are often cultivated to produce crops.

Farming on sloping areas increases the chances of erosion and good soil is consequently lost.

The soil loss causes a decrease in fertility and in the capacity of the land of adsorbing and retaining water. Consequently crop yields are also decreasing.

Photo: Lakew Desta

29 - Steep slope farming